Only revealed what the space between garrison and parkland had always held in reserve.
A grid. Paths that speak for themselves.
Squares that make no demands.
The place knew.
We followed.*

Potsdam's Kreativquartier has grown into the city as if it had always been there – bridging historical order and contemporary life, the old garrison town and its sweeping garden landscapes. A network of paths and squares brings clarity to the space, while trees, perennials, and grasses settle it into something unhurried and grounded. Around landmarks like the Orangerie, the Langer Stall, and the Musikhaus, the quarter unfolds as a place to work, to pause, or simply to be.

Conceived for everyone who lives and works within it, the Kreativquartier extends Potsdam's long tradition as a city of gardens and culture – accessible, calm, and fully at ease within the urban fabric.
